About the course Global financial crisis causes

Global financial crisis causes course, in this course we delve into the underlying factors that precipitated one of the most significant economic downturns in recent history. Exploring the intricate web of events leading up to the crisis, students dissect the root causes such as lax lending standards, housing market speculation, and financial deregulation. Through case studies and empirical analysis, learners unravel the complexities of interconnected financial markets, highlighting the ripple effects of subprime mortgage defaults and the collapse of complex financial instruments. By examining the role of key players like investment banks, rating agencies, and regulatory bodies, students gain insights into the systemic vulnerabilities that amplified the crisis's impact. Through critical examination of economic theories and historical precedents, students develop a comprehensive understanding of the multifaceted forces driving the Global Financial Crisis.
