Psychiatric health nursing, The Psychiatric Health Nursing and Mental Illness course provides an in-depth exploration of mental health care, focusing on the role of nurses in supporting patients with psychiatric conditions. It covers common mental illnesses such as depression, anxiety, schizophrenia, bipolar disorder, and personality disorders, emphasizing assessment, diagnosis, and evidence-based interventions. Students will learn therapeutic communication, crisis management, and counseling techniques that foster trust and patient recovery. The course also addresses the use of psychopharmacology, monitoring side effects, and promoting adherence to treatment plans. Ethical and legal considerations in psychiatric nursing, including patient rights and confidentiality, are discussed to ensure safe and professional practice. Additionally, the course explores strategies for reducing stigma, supporting families, and promoting community mental health. Through case studies and clinical practice, learners develop critical thinking and empathy, preparing them to deliver holistic, patient-centered care and contribute effectively to mental health teams in hospitals, clinics, and community settings.
