Maternity nursing, The Maternity Nursing course introduces students to the principles and practices of caring for women during pregnancy, childbirth, and the postpartum period, as well as newborn care. It covers maternal anatomy and physiology, prenatal assessment, antenatal care, and recognition of normal and high-risk pregnancies. Students learn about the stages of labor, pain management techniques, delivery procedures, and emergency interventions. The course also emphasizes postpartum care, including maternal recovery, lactation support, and monitoring for complications. Neonatal topics include immediate newborn assessment, thermoregulation, feeding, and infection prevention. Psychosocial aspects such as emotional support, cultural sensitivity, and patient education are integrated to prepare nurses for holistic care. Practical training focuses on clinical skills like vital sign monitoring, fetal heart rate assessment, and assisting in labor and delivery. By blending theory with hands-on practice, the course equips nursing students with the knowledge and confidence to promote safe motherhood, healthy newborns, and family-centered care in diverse healthcare settings.
