Pediatric nursing, The Pediatric Nursing course focuses on the care of infants, children, and adolescents, addressing their unique physical, emotional, and developmental needs. It covers growth and development milestones, pediatric assessment techniques, and the management of common childhood illnesses and chronic conditions. Students learn principles of nutrition, immunization, pain management, and family-centered care, with emphasis on communication strategies tailored to children and their families. The course also explores pediatric emergencies, infection control, and ethical considerations in child healthcare. Practical training includes monitoring vital signs, administering medications safely, and providing support for both patients and families in hospital and community settings. By combining theory with clinical practice, the course prepares nursing students to deliver compassionate, evidence-based care that promotes health, prevents disease, and supports recovery in children, while also guiding families through education and emotional support to ensure holistic pediatric healthcare.
