Course Presenter : Ø§Ù„Ù…Ø¹Ù‡Ø¯ Ø§Ù„Ù†ÙŠ Ø§Ù„ØµØ

Health and human behavior, in this course explores the complex relationship between health and human behavior, highlighting how psychological, social, and cultural factors influence physical well-being and disease prevention. Learners will study health-related behaviors such as nutrition, exercise, stress management, smoking, and substance use, examining their impact on overall health outcomes. The course emphasizes theories of behavior change, including cognitive-behavioral approaches and motivational strategies, to promote healthier lifestyles. Participants will also gain insights into the role of social determinants of health, mental health awareness, and the influence of family, peers, and community on health decisions. Practical case studies and interactive activities help learners develop skills to assess behavior, design interventions, and support positive health practices. By the end of the course, students will be equipped to apply behavioral science principles in healthcare, public health, and everyday life to improve both individual and community well-being.
