Why do I struggle with drawing? â€ªDrawing CHALLENGESâ€¬â€ This is probably the most common reason why people struggle with drawing. They simply need more practice to get better. Drawing is a skill and like with any other skill, you can't expect to get better without practicing it. So many people think that drawing is just something that some people can do and others can't. People make all kinds of excuses of why they canâ€™t draw. Trust me, Iâ€™ve heard just about all them. The truth is, I believe that anyone can draw. It simply takes overcoming a few misconceptions about drawing and dispelling a few myths. Here are some common reasons that people struggle with drawing and how you can overcome them. No matter what the â€œpitfallâ€ may be, you can overcome them and draw well. Letâ€™s identify the most common reasons people struggle with drawingâ€¦ Reason 1 â€“ You Need More Practice This is probably the most common reason why people struggle with drawing. They simply need more practice to get better. Drawing is a skill and like with any other skill, you canâ€™t expect to get better without practicing it. So many people think that drawing is just something that some people can do and others canâ€™t. This simply is not true. Anyone can draw, but you have to want it enough to practice it. And practice includes making mistakes â€“ lots of them. Youâ€™ll learn from your mistakes and your drawing skill will improve. But first you have to be willing to invest some hours of practice. Reason 2 â€“ You Havenâ€™t Learned How to â€œSee Like an Artistâ€ Seeing like an artist is different from simply seeing. Artists see the world as lines, shapes, forms, colors, and values. They are able to simplify the complex objects around us into abstractions that are closer to how our eyes actually â€œseeâ€ things. Artists are able to block out what their brains (or left brains anyway) are telling them and focus only on the abstract light that their eyes are actually recording. Artists are then able to take this abstract information and organize it on the surface using a medium in the manner that their eyes have recorded it, thus creating an illusion that translates to the brain of the viewer as reality. An artist, for example wouldnâ€™t draw a chair. Instead, they would draw the lines, shapes, values, and colors that make up the chair in the manner that they are observed. The result is an illusion of a chair.
