In a nutshell, angular 2 is a component based MVC framework. The components and directives are the controllers, the template (HTML) processed by Angular and the browser is the view, and if you don't combine the model with the controller, you get a MVC pattern. Is angular better than MVC? Single-page applications, and Angular in particular, are constantly being updated with more and more presentation libraries and extensions compared to ASP.NET MVC. Angular provides robust extensibility and customization and has deep community support that is continually growing.
